Aid for drought-hit Maharashtra farmers before Diwali: Chandrashekhar Bawankule

MUMBAI, Oct 7 (PTI)

THE Maharashtra Government will provide financial assistance to the drought-hit farmers before Diwali, Revenue Minister Chandrashekhar Bawankule has assured, noting that 45 per cent of the crop loss assessment has been completed in the affected regions. After a drought review meeting on Tuesday, Bawankule told reporters that the Government was examining the panchnamas to ensure that crop losses were accurately assessed.

"Forty-five per cent of crop loss panchnamas have been completed. The remaining work should be expedited," he said.

The meeting reviewed water storage, crop losses and the measures that could be taken to provide assistance to farmers before Diwali, the Minister informed.

It was also decided to issue a Government Resolution (GR) barring the use of potable or treated drinking water for construction activities, he said.

"The Government has also prohibited the use of potable or treated drinking water for construction. Only treated water from sewage treatment plants will be permitted for construction activities," he added.

The meeting also discussed action against banks and private financiers allegedly harassing farmers for repayment of loans during the drought situation.

"Banks were directed not to repeatedly demand documents from farmers who had already availed themselves of crop loans. Nationalised and private banks, as well as private financiers, would face strict action if they contacted farmers for loan repayment during the drought," Bawankule said.

He said district-level meetings under the Chairmanship of Collectors and discussions at the Chief Secretary's level would be held to resolve such issues.

The Government also decided to complete heirship records and KYC formalities village-wise under loan-waiver schemes so that eligible farmers are not deprived of benefits.

Farmers without AgriStack will also be covered under relief measures, while efforts will be made to bring Class-II farmers onto the platform, Bawankule said. AgriStack is a digital public infrastructure for agriculture created by the Centre to build a unified database of farmers and their land records.

The meeting also reviewed the availability of fodder and measures to address shortages. The Government plans to establish fodder depots through Gram Panchayats instead of relying entirely on fodder camps. It also decided to develop grasslands on forest, fallow and Government land near water resources to create fodder banks.

Mah hub of 'urban Maoist' activities: Govt on Special Public Security Act

MUMBAI, Oct 7 (PTI)

THE Maharashtra Special Public Security Act was introduced as the State has become the "focal point of urban Maoist" activities, the Government has said, citing the presence of 64 active frontal organisations, the highest in the country.

The legislation was brought to provide a robust legal framework to prevent and tackle unlawful, subversive, and extremist activities, the State Government said in an affidavit filed in the Bombay High Court on Tuesday.

The affidavit was submitted in response to a bunch of petitions challenging the constitutional validity of the Maharashtra Special Public Security Act.

The growing presence of "urban Maoist" networks across the State necessitated a special legal framework to tackle unlawful and subversive activities, it noted. Maharashtra had emerged as a "focal point for urban Maoist activities". Relying on data collated by the Ministry of Home Affairs, it claimed that 64 active frontal organisations were operating in the State.

"The legislation seeks to strike a balance between fundamental liberties and the State's duty to protect public order and national integrity," the affidavit stated. The petitions were filed by the Congress, the Communist Party of India and some social activists. A Bench of Chief Justice M C Tripathi and Justice Advait Sethna on Tuesday granted the petitioners time to submit their rejoinder to the Government's affidavit.

System should reach women in distress; don't make them run after system: NCW Chief

NEW DELHI, Oct 7 (PTI)

NATIONAL Commission for Women Chief Vijaya Rahatkar on Wednesday said the system should reach women in distress, rather than they being made to run after the system.

Addressing a National Conference of protection officers on strengthening protection and justice in cases of domestic violence, she said a woman in need of protection needs to be told: "You are not alone, the system is with you."

Protection officers are officials appointed by State Governments under the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act (PWDVA), 2005 and act as the frontline support for women in distress.

"Our effort should be to ensure that the system reaches the woman, the woman should not have to run after the system," he added.

She also underlined that technology is a powerful tool at the disposal of protection officers and other agencies to make their response mechanisms faster and more efficient through digital platforms, helplines, data, and online systems.

"But we must remember that technology can make systems faster, but it cannot automatically bring sensitivity. Therefore, we must advance a human-centric approach alongside technology, along with empathy and a data-driven approach," she said.

"We are moving towards a country where no woman has to prove her strength for her security, rather, the system itself becomes her strength. Where protection is not only in the law book but is visible in the life of every needy woman," she said.

She said the country is moving to a phase where justice is not just a right, but a lived experience of every woman. And where for a woman, the Government is not just an office or a system, but a trusted support system in her most difficult times," she added.

Rahatkar said providing security to a woman is not just about securing her today, it is also about protecting her dignity and about securing her tomorrow.

"We have to move forward towards a system where no woman is alone, no voice should remain unheard and there should be no compromise on the dignity of any woman," she added.

She said a protection officer is not just a Government post and not just an administrative responsibility, but a responsibility that requires knowledge of the law as well as sensitivity.
