Hardware worth $73 million reportedly smuggled into China despite US export ban; ended up with company founded by Alice Huang

WASHINGTON

A Chinese company founded by Alice Huang, the alleged spy for Beijing at the centre of the scandal surrounding Nvidia, obtained banned AI chips, Bloomberg News reported on Friday.

"A Chinese company founded by Alice Huang, the woman at the center of a controversy dogging Nvidia Corp., procured smuggled AI chips that were installed at a Shanghai data center with links to Megaspeed International Pte," the Bloomberg report said.

Report said chips worth $73 million reached China.

Nvidia's former CEO Jensen Huang resigned on Thursday after admitting to having extramarital affairs, including one reportedly with Alice Huang. China denies that she is a spy. The scandal has raised concerns that high-end Nvidia microchips might have found their way to China, the United States' main AI rival, in circumvention of Washington's export restrictions.

Huang is mainly known as a former top executive at Megaspeed International, a Singapore-based data center company that has drawn scrutiny over allegedly steering Nvidia chips to China.

However, she also founded Shanghai Longteng Intelligent Computing, a company based in the eastern Chinese economic hub. Bloomberg reported, citing an unnamed source, that Aperia Cloud Services, an official Nvidia partner headquartered in Singapore, purchased servers containing Nvidia's H800 chips from Dell Technologies. Those servers later ended up in the hands of Shanghai Longteng, the financial news outlet said, citing documents submitted to the Chinese government. It was not clear how the hardware was obtained or whether Alice Huang was involved in the deal, according to Bloomberg.

The United States banned the export of H800 chips to China in 2023, as part of an effort to slow Beijing's development of AI technology.

Under the guise of purchasing computer hardware for its Southeast Asia data hubs, Megaspeed has allegedly helped Beijing circumvent trade restrictions by shipping Nvidia chips into China.

Megaspeed said on Thursday it was investigating whether it had complied with export controls on sensitive microchips. Malaysia has said it is probing a Megaspeed subsidiary over the possible diversion of advanced AI chips to other countries.

Meanwhile, a political tug of war erupted in Washington when US Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent on Friday blaming the Commerce Department for failing to blacklist Megaspeed. Speaking on CNBC, Bessent said Treasury, the Defence Department, the US Trade Representative's office and the State Department had backed adding Megaspeed to Washington's trade blacklist, "for months". Agencies

NORTH Korea's state-backed hackers stole more than $400 million using a "highly effective social engineering scheme" involving identity theft and AI-powered fake video calls, the FBI said on Thursday.

The FBI this month accused hackers affiliated with North Korea of the theft of $6 billion from cryptocurrency platform Binance.

"The North Korean regime relies on proceeds from large-scale cryptocurrency theft to fund its illicit weapons program, stealing billions of dollars from law enforcement agency dubbed "FaceStealer," has led to the theft of more than $400 million in the last 18 months.

FaceStealer hackers pretend to be someone known to the victim to lure them to a video meeting, using AI-powered deepfake video to gain trust.

The hackers then "introduce a fake technical error" which requires the victim to click on a link or a prompt that installs malware. By exploiting the victim's contact lists, social media and communication apps, hackers can impersonate them to ensnare the next target. AFP

THE US military said Friday it shot down two Iranian attack drones headed toward Bahrain, denying Iran's claim that it had struck a US radar system in the kingdom. CENTCOM, the US command center covering the region, said there were no injuries or damage.

Iran's state-owned IRNA news agency quoted a statement by the Revolutionary Guard as saying the attack on the radar system followed a US strike on a telecommunications pole in the southern Iranian port of Sirik.

Bahrain has been one of the strongest critics of Iran and is home to the American Navy's 5th Fleet.

The statement said the attack on the radar was a serious warning to the US to cease its strikes. It was Iran's first report of targeting a facility in Bahrain since September.

During an air war that began in February, Iran targeted U.S. bases in neighboring Arab nations including Bahrain in retaliation for US strikes.

Since then, Iran routinely targets oil tankers passing through the Strait of Hormuz, the critical waterway for international oil shipments.

Bahrain's Ministry of Information did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Meanwhile, Iran's Revolutionary Guard said that a liquefied petroleum gas tanker struck a mine, causing an explosion, while trying to sail through the Strait of Hormuz, according to the state-run IRNA news agency.

The Guard said the vessel ignored repeated warnings while transiting the eastern part of the strategic waterway.

The claim could not be independently verified, and there was no immediate report of the incident from the United Kingdom Maritime Trade Operations, a British military agency that monitors incidents at sea. Iran continues to warn ships not to pass through the strategic shipping lane without its approval. AP

THE EU must "act now" to ensure Europe stays in the AI race with the United States and China, French AI firm Mistral's chief executive Arthur Mensch told a summit of the bloc's leaders on Friday.

The leaders heard from Mensch and Nobel-prize winner Geoffrey Hinton, widely known as one of the "godfathers" of AI, as they discussed how Europe can balance its AI ambitions with its desire to protect citizens from the growing risks posed by the technology.

"Europe has all the technology and the talent to lead the AI race," Mensch, whose company is considered Europe's leading AI model developer, told the leaders, according to comments shared with AFP.

"What it needs now is speed, financing and a strong coordination between member states."

"That is why we call on European leaders to act now. For now, the choice is still ours," he said.

Mistral has pushed for Europe to charge ahead on AI, in contrast to calls by US CEOs including OpenAI's Sam Altman and Anthropic's Dario Amodei this year to slow down AI development. AFP

Donald Trump Jr, citing the financial links between the president's son and rival US firm Polymarket.

"We have mutually agreed to end Don's advisory role after his firm's significant investment in a competitor this past summer. We are grateful for his contributions in helping us market Kalshi to more customers," a Kalshi spokesperson said, according to US media reports.

Donald Trump Jr, the president's oldest son, joined Kalshi in January 2025 as a "strategic advisor." His activities in the prediction markets are just one of multiple business efforts by the Trump family since Donald Trump became president.

In August 2026, Polymarket announced that Trump Jr had joined the company's advisory board following a "strategic investment" by 1789 Capital in which he is a partner.

Kalshi and Polymarket dominate the growing US prediction market in which customers can place bets on sporting event outcomes, elections, financial markets, among other areas.

Attorney General Letitia James said New York's gambling laws protect children from underage betting and help fight gambling. Kalshi faces similar legal challenges in multiple US states where gaming regulators have issued cease-and-desist orders or filed suit accusing the platform of operating an unlicensed gambling business. AFP

NORWAY'S Supreme Court on Friday ruled that three oil licences granted by the government in the North Sea were invalid since their emissions impact had not adequately been accounted for.

The SC agreed with climate campaigners, who challenged the validity of the licences, arguing that the environmental impact assessments had not considered emissions from burning the oil after it had been extracted.

"This is a historic victory for the climate and for Norwegian democracy," Haldis Tjeldflaat Helle, head of the Norwegian wing of Greenpeace, told AFP.

"The ruling is important because it clarifies requirements for decision-making process in these cases. The Ministry will follow these requirements in its new assessment," Energy Minister Terje Aasland said. AFP
