Munir in Tehran as Pak makes big push to end West Asia war

Latest visit comes amid progress in talks held by Pak interior minister

ISLAMABAD

PAKISTAN'S Field Marshal Asim Munir departed on Friday for an official visit to Tehran in an effort to get the US and Iran reach a deal to end the conflict.

Munir's second visit to Tehran in little more than a month comes after progress was reported in talks held by Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi, who has been in Iran since Wednesday, with high-ranking members of Iranian leadership, including twice with Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi, sources said.

Munir's visit signals a final push by Pakistan to try to get a deal, Axios reported. "Munir has left today for an official visit where he will have meetings with Iranian leadership," the sources in Pakistan said.

Citing sources,Geo News reported that Naqvi will continue his stay in Tehran on Friday and hold a series of important meetings related to ongoing US-Iran negotiations and discussions on regional diplomatic efforts. Pakistan authorities have not commented on the engagements of Naqvi in Iran. Pakistan has been maintaining discreet silence on the key diplomatic outreach.

Pakistan hosted in April the only direct negotiations between US and Iranian officials to take place since the war began. Munir was at the centre of the action during that round of talks, greeting both delegations on their arrival and displaying bonhomie with US Vice President JD Vance. But the talks ultimately failed, with Iran accusing the US of making "excessive demands". Since then, the two sides have exchanged multiple proposals, with the threat of renewed war looming all along.

A ceasefire agreement since April 8 has halted hostilities but US President Donald Trump warned on Wednesday that the window for diplomacy was closing. Meanwhile, a senior UAE official said, the US and Iran have just a "50-50" chance of reaching an agreement that would free up the Strait of Hormuz. Agencies

German business morale up despite war: Survey

FRANKFURT

GERMAN business morale unexpectedly increased in May, a survey showed on Friday, raising hopes Europe's biggest economy is weathering the Iran war energy shock better than feared.

The Ifo institute confidence barometer rose to 84.9 points from 84.5 in April, the first time it has gone up since the start of the conflict.

Analysts had expected a slight decrease.

"The German economy is stabilising for the time being, although situation remains fragile," said Clemens Fuest, Ifo's president.

The survey had slumped in the months following the start of the US-Israeli war against Iran.

The energy shock triggered by the near total closure of the Strait of Hormuz is a heavy blow for Germany's power-hungry manufacturers, and dimmed hopes of a strong recovery this year for the long-struggling economy.

But a massive ramp-up in defence and infrastructure spending may be offsetting the conflict's impact and helping to bolster business morale, analysts said.

The latest Ifo survey, based on responses from around 9,000 businesses, showed that companies were more optimistic about both their current situation and future prospects.

Morale among companies in the manufacturing, services and trade sectors improved. But it fell slightly among construction companies. AFP
