began her career as a primary school teacher and spent close to a decade in the profession before deciding to pursue her long-cherished dream of joining the Air Force. Her husband, Abhinav Sahu, has been serving in the Australian Air Force for the past 14 years.

Talking to The Tribune, Neha said her family — particularly her husband and 14-year-old daughter — stood firmly by her throughout her journey. "I wanted to challenge myself and step out of the conventional path. The intensive war-zone training, which lasted three months, was the toughest part," she said. The training, held at the Wagga Wagga centre, involved weapons handling, demanding physical drills and prolonged separation from family.

Neha completed her schooling at DAV School and Satluj School in Sirsa before pursuing a degree in psychology from Shah Satnam Ji Girls College. Reflecting on her roots, she said, "I come from a background where girls are usually expected to settle after basic education. I believe if girls dream big, even the sky isn't the limit. It is encouraging to see parents in India now supporting their daughters' ambitions, which will bring social change."

Her father, Rajmal Pachar, expressed pride in her achievement. "She has made the family and the region proud. Her hard work has truly paid off," he said.

Residents of Ding Mandi also hailed her accomplishment, calling it a source of inspiration for young girls in the area.
