The spirit of care, compassion, and dedication was palpable at the grand International Nurses Day celebration, organised by The Times of India in association with the Florence College of Nursing and Z A Royal College of Nursing. Held on Tuesday at the Florence College campus in Irba, the event united students, faculty, and healthcare educators to recognise the invaluable contribution nurses make to society and the global healthcare system.

The programme commenced with the traditional lighting of the lamp, followed by a cake-cutting ceremony. These gestures symbolised the core values of hope, healing, and selfless service that define the nursing vocation. Students from both institutions participated enthusiastically in cultural displays and talent showcases, transforming the solemn occasion into a vibrant festival of professional pride.

ADVOCATING FOR EMPATHY AND EXCELLENCE

Addressing the gathering, Zeenat Kausar, chairperson and secretary, Florence College of Nursing, emphasised the essential roles of empathy, discipline, and commitment. She lauded the students for choosing a path dedicated to the service of humanity.

“Nursing is not merely a career; it is a lifelong commitment to serve with compassion and dignity. Nurses are the primary support system for patients during their most vulnerable moments. Our goal is to nurture skilled professionals who carry kindness and patience in their hearts,” Dr Kausar remarked.

Dr Shaheen Kausar, one of the organisers, echoed these sentiments, describing nursing as one of the world's noblest callings. She noted that nurses stand as a resilient force for humanity, providing care that transcends basic medical assistance.

CELEBRATING TALENT AND CREATIVITY

Beyond the speeches, the event focused on the

From ceremonial lamp lighting to spirited talent competitions, the International Nurses Day celebration highlighted the vital role of nurses. Students were reminded that nursing is a noble vocation of 'service to mankind', combining professional skill with deep sense of empathy silent efforts of healthcare workers, using the platform to motivate the next generation. Reshma, an attendee, noted that such celebrations remind students that their service brings vital hope and confidence to the community.

A central feature of the day was a series of competitions designed to foster teamwork and confidence. The winners were felicitated for their artistic flair and technical skill.

Anjali Prasad (BSc fourth year) took top honours in mehendi competition, while Radha Kumari (BSc third year) secured a double win in flower pot decoration and wall hanging. Deepika Singh won in origami, and Vristy triumphed in jute crafting. Rajnandini claimed the pencil art title, and Sangeeta's team excelled in notice board decoration. Reshma's group won the wall painting category, while Priya's team dominated the quiz competition.

The ramp walk proved a major highlight, with Ambika's confidence earning her the winner's trophy.

A FUTURE STEEPED IN ETHICS

The audience was treated to a kaleidoscope of cultural performances, including music, dance, and drama, showcasing the versatility of these future healthcare professionals. The event saw a strong turnout of dignitaries, including Dr Najrin

Kausar, Dr Vikram Mazumdar, and several faculty members such as Jyoti Gloria Mundu and Shoaib Akhtar.

The celebration concluded with a heartfelt vote of thanks. The final message to the students was clear: as they step into the wards of tomorrow, they must uphold the highest standards of ethics and dignity, ensuring that the flame of compassion lit during their training continues to burn brightly in their practice.
