versations quickly moved off-line. Victims were persuaded to meet in person, often at public places, before being taken to isolated locations."One of the accused would impersonate a police officer by wearing a uniform to create fear and legitimacy, after which victims were threatened with false criminal cases and forced to pay large sums as 'settlement'," said Pan-kaj Kumar, DCP, Crime Branch.

In one such case, police said, the complainant alleged that he was called to meet a woman at a popular outlet in Janakpuri after connecting on Tinder. He was then taken to a flat along with another associate. ENS
