

POTENTIAL US-IRAN DEAL LIKELY TO BE SIGNED IN GENEVA: REPORT

DON SAYS SIGNING CEREMONY AS SOON AS THIS WEEKEND, VANCE TO ATTEND

Tehran losing grip on Hormuz

WASHINGTON

US President Donald Trump has signaled that Vice President J D Vance is expected to attend the signing ceremony, which he said would take place in Europe as soon as this weekend.

According to a CNN report, the signing ceremony for the memorandum of understanding would most likely be held in Geneva, Switzerland, as early as Sunday.

Sources said Vienna was also being considered.

Two sources with knowledge of the diplomatic talks told the US network that the signing ceremony would be held in Swiss capital. One of them said the signing ceremony would mark the start of "phase two" of diplomatic talks.

The report said the memo is being called the "Islamabad declaration," in recognition of the key role played by Pakistan in mediation.

Switzerland, meanwhile, has offered to host the possible signing of a peace agreement, the Swiss foreign ministry told AFP on Friday.

"Switzerland is fully engaged. We are in close contact with the United States and Iran," the ministry said in a brief message sent to AFP.

The Swiss foreign ministry said it was playing an active role "to support efforts toward a Memorandum of Understanding intended to consolidate the truce and pave the way for de-escalation in the context of the conflict between Iran and the USA". In addition, the ministry said it "has proposed Switzerland as the venue for a possible signing, should the parties agree to it".

A senior official in President Trump's administration said on Friday that the US was "80 to 85 percent" confident of inking an accord with Tehran to end the war in the coming days.

President Trump has repeatedly declared Iran and the US are on the verge of agreeing on a deal to end the war, but a litany of sticking points has delayed finalising an accord and will complicate its implementation, analysts say.

In what has become a familiar pattern, Trump on Thursday withdrew a threat of renewed strikes on Iran and said a deal could be signed in the coming days, only for the Islamic Republic's foreign ministry to respond by saying it "has not reached a final conclusion on the agreement".

Arash Azizi, lecturer at Yale

University, told AFP that one reason the deal has taken so long is that the Iranian side believed "they could hold out to get better terms" after not capitulating during the conflict.

Trump, meanwhile, "could hardly stomach" releasing Iran's frozen assets—a key demand of Tehran—and also risked facing accusations the accord would be more favourable to Iran than the 2015 nuclear deal he pulled out of during his first term, he added.

Both Iran and the United States would appear to have vested interests in ending a conflict that saw five weeks of all-out war, paused by an uneasy ceasefire on April 8.

The war has become increasingly unpopular in the US, even among the president's core supporters.

DUBAI

IRAN'S stranglehold on the Strait of Hormuz may be easing—and its own oil problems now seem to be mounting.

The crucial strait at the mouth of the Persian Gulf, through which a fifth of the world's oil and natural gas supplies once passed, has been effectively shut by Iran's attacks on shipping since the start of the war in February.

Even with much of its navy sunk, just Iran's threat to attack made shippers and insurers hesitant to send vessels through the strait. The resulting energy crunch has fueled global inflation, including in the US.

The situation, however, appears to be shifting. Analysts say more oil from Gulf Arab states appears to be getting out to market, with the help of the US military.

US President Donald Trump says a "secret mission" to provide overwatch for ships got more than 100 million barrels of crude oil out. Meanwhile, American forces imposing a blockade have repeatedly shot at or stopped ships associated with Iran's sanctioned oil trade, affecting the country's ability to get the hard currency it needs.

The flow of oil remains below the 15 million barrels a day that once came through the strait. So it won't satiate the global energy market, especially as nations draw down their reserves, which have been used to somewhat cushion the blow to world supplies. But if the flow can be sustained or ramped up, it could change the calculus of the crisis.
