Trump upbeat as Doha talks on US-Iran deal gather pace

Technical talks focus on implementing the ceasefire, reopening the Strait of Hormuz and resolving key issues before reaching a permanent deal

DOHA

IRAN and the United States began indirect talks with mediators in Doha on Wednesday in a push to advance negotiations and quell tensions following exchanges of fire between the two sides.

Trump hails progress

Meanwhile, US President Donald Trump hailed the progress, saying there had been “very good meetings” in Doha. “As far as things are going, the denuclearisation of Iran is moving along well. They’ve had very good meetings, and we’ll see,” Trump told reporters. “We hit them very hard... but we’re getting along very well,” he said.

Iran, however, insisted there would be no direct negotiations with Washington. Foreign ministry spokesman Esmail Baqaei said the Iranian delegation, led by Deputy Foreign Minister Kazem Gharibabadi, had “no plans for negotiations with the American side at any level over the coming days”.

Technical talks, mediated by Qatar and Pakistan, are focused on implementing the memorandum of understanding reached last month. The agreement includes a 60-day ceasefire, the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz and a framework for a final deal to permanently end the conflict and address Iran’s nuclear programme.

Qatar said US and Iranian officials held separate meetings with its leadership as efforts continued to advance the negotiations. As the talks continued, Iranian state television reported that a foreign container ship had run aground in the Strait of Hormuz after using a route not approved by Tehran. AFP
