

NITK researchers develop antimicrobial coating for longer lasting orthopaedic implants

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Mangaluru

RESEARCHERS at the National Institute of Technology Karnataka (NITK) Surathkal have developed a first-of-its-kind advanced bioactive, mechanically durable, and localised antimicrobial coating technology for orthopaedic implants, with particular application in hip and knee joint replacements.

A press release from NITK said the patented innovation marks a significant milestone in indigenous biomedical engineering and represents a major step forward in improving patient outcomes for millions of orthopaedic implant recipients across India and globally.

The durable bioactive and antimicrobial composite coating can be directly applied onto implant surfaces using an opti-mised High Velocity Oxy-Fuel (HVOF) thermal spray process thereby addressing the growing challenges of implant-associated infections, implant loosening, and suboptimal long-term performance of conventional implants.

The coating is engineered to deliver localised antimicrobial protection while simultaneously improving the mechanical durability, wear resistance, coating adhesion, and bone integration of the implant.

The enhanced osseointegration enables stronger bonding between bone and implant, while the antimicrobial functionality combats bacterial growth at the implant site, thereby substantially reducing the risk of post-surgical infections.

Pre-clinical studies conducted by the research team demonstrated promising performance compared to conventional implants currently available in the market. The technology has the potential to significantly reduce the need for revision surgeries and improve long-term patient outcomes that carry profound implications for healthcare costs and patient quality of life.

The innovation has resulted in multiple international research publications and the technology has been granted a patent.

The research team is currently working toward clinical translation and commercialisation of the technology, with the patented technology having been translated into a deep-tech startup founded to bring this solution to market.

The technology was developed by Dr Sudhakar C Jambagi, Associate Professor, Department of Mechanical Engineering, NITK Surathkal, and his doctoral student Dr Deep Shankar, who completed his PhD under the supervision of Dr Jambagi and has since gone on to found and lead the deep-tech startup established to commercialise this breakthrough technology.

The innovation has been developed under the 'Make in India' initiative, and is fully aligned with the government of India's vision of 'Swastha Bharat' and 'Viksit Bharat' by promoting indigenous biomedical technology and delivering affordable, advanced healthcare solutions to the people of India, added the release.

AI-linked CCTVs, speed radars detect 47,709 traffic violations

@ UDUPI

AI-linked CCTV cameras and speed radars installed at six locations on national highways in Udupi district have detected 47,709 traffic violations in just one week. Udupi Superintendent of Police Hariram Shankar said, "The radars and cameras were installed at Kaup, Uchilla, Gangolli, Byndoor, Karkala and Thekkate. The cameras became operational from May 21 to May 26, during which a total of 3,99,319 vehicles were monitored."

The violations recorded include 29,484 cases of speed limit violation by LMVs, three-wheelers and two-wheelers, 12,440 cases of not wearing seat belts, 11,509 cases of riding without helmets, 2,783 cases of wrong-side driving, 2,438 cases of triple riding, and 2,346 heavy motor vehicle (HMV) speed violations. The AI-enabled cameras can automatically detect vehicle number plates, identify the nature of the violation and send the information directly to the district control room, where challans are generated automatically, said SP Hariram Shankar. A total of 243 challans have already been issued in the past one week.

The SP said the system has been introduced to reduce the increasing number of accidents reported on National Highways in the district. He said there are plans to install similar cameras at 14 additional locations across Udupi in the coming days.
