

Bajrang Dal members enter school, allege conversion

The principal said the school had around 400 students and 15 staff members, most of whom were non-Christians, and that the staff tried to explain this to police and those present. "In front of police officers also, we tried to explain that the majority of our students and staff members are non-Christians. But they heaved that aside while "At the time of the incident, parents were also present in the school to drop their wards. They too tried to intervene by saying the school celebrates festivals of every religion and no wrong activities are carried out there. But the right-wing group refused to accept their explanation. They started misbehaving with us and the parents as well," the principal said.

She added that the confusion continued for nearly an hour and left several children frightened. "Small children started crying, but even though I did not stop them, the disturbance ended only after senior police officers reached the scene."
