

Iran Hasn't Received Enough Pain Yet: Trump

US Prez mulls an attack ‘bigger than ever before’

US President Donald Trump said he's considering a "massive attack" on Iran to push the nation to negotiate a peace deal, raising the prospect of even higher energy prices that have already rattled economies.

Trump told Axios in an interview that he was "close to making a decision" on attacks that would be "bigger than ever before." Iran isn't ready to make a deal and "they haven't received enough pain yet," Trump was reported as saying.

The President's remarks underscore the bind he finds himself in after renewed fighting caused an interim peace deal to collapse and all but closed the Strait of Hormuz. On Friday, US missiles struck targets across Iran, reaching as far as its Caspian coast after Trump vowed "major military punishment" for Tehran and its Houthi allies in Yemen for extending the West Asia war to a second major shipping chokepoint, the mouth of the Red Sea.

The Houthi fighters struck two Saudi tankers on Thursday in the Red Sea's Bab el-Mandeb strait, pushing oil prices 7% higher to pierce the $100 per barrel level for the first time since May.

On Friday, Brent crude slipped 2.83% to $97.84 a barrel. But, the contract remained on course for an advance of over 10% this week.

The attacks forced several other tankers to turn around and head north through the Suez Canal, potentially using a much longer and more expensive route to reach Asia by sailing around Africa.

WEST TO EAST STRIKES

US airstrikes hit Piranshahr, in West Azerbaijan Province near Iran's border with Iraq, at 11 AM on Friday, damaging several vehicles, according to the province's emergency services, quoted by Iranian media. US missiles struck a Revolutionary Guards Navy headquarters ters in the Ziba Kenar area of the Caspian Sea province of Gilan, according to a security official in Gilan quoted by Iranian media. Gilan provincial authorities said U.S. projectiles had also struck the port city of Bandar Anzali, according to the ILNA news agency.

Four people were killed and five injured in a U.S. missile attack on the Iranian city of Ahvaz, state broadcaster IRIB said. In a statement carried by Iran's Fars news agency, the Revolutionary Guards warned the public in the Gulf countries of potential strikes against US military personnel who may be using "buildings in cities as locations to direct their crimes". It told people to "immediately move away from areas within a 500-metre radius of covert and hidden locations used by U.S. military personnel".

Since the US and Israel began the war in February, Iran has demonstrated that it can hit US targets in the region, even though Trump said early on that the US had wiped out Iran's military capabilities. Four people familiar with U.S. intelligence said Iranian strikes on CIA targets in the Gulf earlier in the war had prompted US intelligence to investigate whether Russia was assisting Iran with targeting information or drone technology. —Reuters

IRGC Warns Civilians To 'Stay Away From US Forces'

Iran's Revolutionary Guards warned civilians in West Asia on Friday to stay away from US forces, state media reported. "We warn the general public in countries where American soldiers are stationed to immediately stay out of a radius of 500 metres from the places where American soldiers are hiding, in order to be safe," the Guards said in a statement carried by state TV.

Iran's military said on Friday it carried out drone strikes against several American military facilities and bases in Bahrain, Jordan and Kuwait in retaliation for the latest US attacks against the Islamic republic. IRGC, meanwhile, said that they targeted a data centre in Bahrain belonging to Amazon, according to state media. —AFP

With Xi's US Trip in Sept, China may not Retaliate against US Levies

New levy 1.4 percentage points more than previous framework

Donald Trump's new tariffs of 12.5% on China might irk Beijing without provoking a retaliation, even as the US president rebuilds a protectionist wall after the Supreme Court struck down his initial levies.

The duties, announced by the Trump administration on Thursday, are in line with tariff levels it had proposed last month on 60 trading partners, citing what it said were inadequate efforts to address forced labour.

The latest shift means China will face an effective US levy of 22.2%, 1.4 percentage points higher than under the previous framework, according to Bloomberg Economics. It estimates China's burden relative to other trading partners will climb slightly to 11.5 percentage points above the global average.

CLARITY ON AI SUMMIT

The new rates replace global duties of 10% that expired on July 24. Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Lin Jian reiterated that China opposes all forms of unilateral tariffs. Speaking during a regular press briefing on Friday in Beijing, Lin didn't directly respond when asked whether China would take countermeasures against the tariffs. "Beijing will surely express its opposition to tariffs," said Tianchen Xu, a senior China analyst with the Economist Intelligence Unit. "But don't expect meaningful retaliation this time." Chinese officials are seeking clarity from Washington on what the US expects from upcoming artificial intelligence talks, according to people familiar with the matter, as the Trump administration escalates pressure on China's fast-rising AI sector.

As part of that effort, Vice Foreign Minister Ma Zhaoxu visited Washington this week with a remit that includes sounding out US agencies on the scope and likely outcomes of the dialogue, according to the people briefed on the issue who requested anonymity. Chinese officials are looking to clarify the agenda in part to decide who to send for the talks, they said.

White House Press Secretary Karoline Leavitt, asked about the AI race with China and upcoming Trump-Xi meeting, told reporters on Thursday that the technology is of "high importance to the president" and the administration wants to "ensure that America remains dominant in the AI race."

China's Foreign Ministry spokesman Lin Jian said AI is "high on the agenda" of the international community. Bloomberg
