In test. The draft amendments, published in the Gazette of India on October 16, propose that sucrose and fructose should not be added to products intended for infants up to six months.

Under existing rules, lactose and glucose polymers are the preferred carbohydrate sources in infant foods. Sucrose and fructose can also be added when needed, but their combined amount cannot exceed 20% of total carbohydrates. The proposed amendment seeks to prohibit their addition in products for babies up to six months.

The proposal aims to limit early exposure to added sugars amid concerns over childhood obesity and related health risks. It also complements recommendations for exclusive breastfeeding.

of BPNI and convene of Public Advocacy for Public Interest (NAPI), said the rule must be enforced at the final stage. "FSSAI should consider extending the added sucrose and fructose products intended for above six months, concerns over childhood obesity," he said. In a separate FSSAI has proposed residue limits of 20 million (ppm) for aspartame and 50 ppm for imidacloprid. According to the proposed acetaminophen limit is lower than the current limits of 30 ppm in Japan and 50 ppm in the US. The imidacloprid limit is framed with reference to the maximum residue limit.
