

Haryana power employees call off strike after Saini says ‘no privatisation’

Express News Service
Chandigarh, October 23

ELECTRICITY EMPLOYEES and engineers on Friday ended their strike after Haryana Chief Minister Nayab Singh Saini said the state government has directed the HERC (Haryana Electricity Regulatory Commission) to review its decision to grant a licence to a private company and cancel the order.

The decision to withdraw the strike was announced at a joint press conference attended by the Chief Minister, state Power Minister Anil Vij and representatives of the employees’ unions. It followed two rounds of talks between the state government and union leaders. Saini told reporters in Panchkula that the power disruption caused by the strike will also be restored.

One of the employee leaders, Devender Singh Hooda, said the unions went on strike to oppose the privatisation of electricity distribution in the state. However, he said the CM assured them that the government would not allow the privatisation of electricity services in Haryana. Another employee leader said, “We will restore electricity supply across the state with immediate effect.”

According to Hooda, Saini directed the HERC under Section 108 of the Electricity Act, 2003, and provided a copy of the directions to the employees’ representatives. The section empowers a state government to issue written policy directions to the State Electricity Regulatory Commission on matters of policy involving public interest.

Saini said HERC is an independent statutory body established under the Electricity Act, 2003, and exercises its powers in accordance with the law. In view of the situation arising from the Commission’s order, the state has decided to initiate appropriate action within the framework of the applicable legal and statutory provisions.

He said the government would take steps under Section 108 of the Electricity Act, 2003, to issue directions to the Commission.

Army life kept ‘couple apart’, Himachal HC quashes false marriage promise FIR

Richa Sahay
New Delhi, October 23

THE HIMACHAL Pradesh High Court has quashed an FIR alleging sexual intercourse by false promise of marriage against an Indian Army personnel after the woman who lodged the complaint said the case arose from a misunderstanding and that she no longer wished to pursue it.

The man claimed that he had known the woman for a long time and that they had developed a close personal relationship. However, his Army service required him to be posted at different locations, making it difficult for him to meet her or remain in touch.

Justice Chirag Bhanu Singh was hearing the man’s plea seeking to quash the FIR and the criminal proceedings arising from it. “In the case in hand, since the parties (man and woman) happen to have reconciled their differences, seeing to their long relationship. No effective purpose would thus be served in continuing with the criminal litigation,” the October 16 order read. It was placed on record that the man has known the said woman for a long time. Over time, they allegedly developed mutual affection and emotional attachment toward each other, sharing a close personal relationship. The man also claimed that he has no criminal antecedents. He added that due to the nature of his service in the Indian Army, he was required to be posted at different locations. Consequently, he was unable to meet the woman or remain in touch with her. Due to this misunderstanding, the man added that the woman had got the said FIR registered. It was claimed that they had re-established communication, resolved their differences amicably, and mutually agreed not to pursue the FIR further.

The Himachal Pradesh High Court found that the couple’s compromise was voluntary, noting that both had confirmed it. FILE

It was placed on record that both the man and the woman had voluntarily entered into a compromise deed. The two appeared before the court, and the woman stated that she was indeed in a relationship with the man for a long time and that the FIR had been registered due to a misunderstanding. She also mentioned that she did not intend to proceed with the case any further.

After interacting with the couple, the court found that their compromise was voluntary, noting that both had personally confirmed it. The high court said that while deciding whether to quash criminal proceedings following a settlement, courts must consider the nature and gravity of the allegations and their impact on society.

“Generally, heinous offences of mental depravity, murder, rape, dacoity, etc may not come within the purview of the same, but offences arising from commercial, financial, mercantile and civil, partnership, matrimonial or family disputes, where the wrong is basically private or personal in nature may be given a quietus, excising such powers,” the court further added.

The court also cautioned that quashing criminal proceedings must not amount to an abuse of the process of law. However, in this case, it noted that the couple had voluntarily settled their dispute and that their statements confirming the settlement were already on record. It held that ending the criminal proceedings would be in the interest of justice and fair play.

“Keeping in view the burgeoning pendency of cases, the unwanted cases can be given a status enabling the Courts to give due weightage and time to the deserving cases on its docket,” it added. Finding the case fit for quashing in view of the nature of the allegations and the circumstances recorded in the order, the high court set aside the FIR and all criminal proceedings arising from it. The man was represented by advocate Rajat Thakur, while the woman was represented by advocate Vikrant Chandel.
