Party emerges mobilising force behind the agitation against SIR

K S SREEJITH @T'Puram

IT is a dream comeback for the CPM, relegated to the sidelines of national politics for over a decade.

With its combined strength in both Houses of Parliament countable on one hand, the party has emerged as the rallying force behind the agitation against the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls.

Despite its declining electoral fortunes, the CPM has brought parties beyond the Congress-led INDIA bloc together around the agitation.

By uniting forces across the political spectrum, the party has reasserted its role in opposition coordination at a critical juncture in national politics.

CPM general secretary M A Baby's letter to opposition leaders, urging a united response to developments involving the Election Commission, proved decisive. He even reached out to the party's bete noire in West Bengal, Trinamool Congress chief Mamata Banerjee, seeking her support for the agitation.

Baby also met AAP convenor Arvind Kejriwal to broaden the campaign, despite the latter's differences with the Congress leadership.

"After reports emerged about the SIR row, our available politburo (PB) realised on September 23 that the issue could trigger a paradigm shift in the agitation against the Election Commission and the Union government," Baby told TNIE.

The PB decided to reach out to all non-NDA parties, including those outside the INDIA bloc, to build a common platform for joint action, he said. The outreach included the Shiromani Akali Dal, Biju Janata Dal, Makkal Needhi Maiam, AAP and Trinamool Congress, among others.

> This is the first time we have seen a general secretary consistently joining protests, whether it is the workers' agitation in Noida or student protests at Jantar Mantar
> A politburo member

This was followed by an INDIA bloc coordination meeting on September 30, where opposition leaders agreed on a joint programme of political action against the SIR and the EC.

The October 10 protest in Delhi brought together leaders from parties often divided over political strategy and their ties with the Congress.

The participation of Pinarayi Vijayan, Manik Sarkar, Mamata and Kejriwal underscored the breadth of the mobilisation.

For the CPM, the campaign was an opportunity to demonstrate that its organisational reach could unite parties well beyond formal alliance boundaries.

Despite its electoral setbacks, the CPM continues to draw on its organisational network and experience in mobilising workers, farmers and students around common issues.

"We have maintained good relations with the CJP since the NEET agitation," said CPM PB member Vijoo Krishnan.

"We have consistently raised issues affecting students, farmers and workers. We do not approach issues with a sense of fatalism. After 2014, the Modi government was forced to withdraw the land acquisition ordinance and the farm laws, in which the CPM played a major role," he said.

The initiative also comes amid questions over the CPM's ability to sustain its national political engagement following the death of former general secretary Sitaram Yechury in September 2024. Yechury had maintained close ties with Congress leaders, including Rahul Gandhi, and played a key role in coordinating opposition parties.

Baby's outreach to leaders like Mamata and Kejriwal has helped the CPM expand its engagement beyond its immediate political circle. Whether this cross-party mobilisation can translate into a more durable political alignment remains an open question.

A PB member cited Baby's consistent presence at street protests as another defining feature of his leadership.

"This is the first time we have seen a general secretary consistently joining protests, whether it is the workers' agitation in Noida or student protests at Jantar Mantar," the leader said on condition of anonymity.

"Prakash Karat and Yechury had senior leaders such as EMS Namboodiripad and Harkishan Singh Surjeet to guide them. Baby, however, has carried out the work without such senior leaders," he said.

Lathicharge during Jamboo Savari: 4-year-old in ICU

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Mysuru

A four-year-old boy, who was watching the Dasara Jamboo Savari procession with his parents, suffered a serious head injury when police resorted to lathicharge to control the crowd at Highway Circle in Mysuru on Wednesday. The child, Shishira, is undergoing treatment in the ICU at a private hospital.

One of the family members of the boy, Girish, told TNIE that police personnel deployed near the Highway Circle resorted to caning during the procession to control the crowd, and a baton struck the boy on the head while he was standing with his parents.

The parents rushed the bleeding child to the hospital where doctors provided emergency treatment for the head injury. The child reportedly required stitches, and his condition has caused grave concern among his family.

"We brought our child to watch the Dasara. Was it necessary to wield a lathi against a small child?" Girish said, adding that doctors told them that they have to perform a surgery to ensure that there was no blood clot.

Need strong action against Jebi Mather, Sudhakaran: Unnithan

Kasaragod: Congress leader and MP Rajmohan Unnithan demanded action against Congress leader K Sudhakaran and Mahila Congress chief Jebi Mather for making public statements on internal matters of the party. Reacting strongly against the leaders for violating KPCC guidelines, Unnithan said that regardless of the opinions that leaders like him speak in public, they are bound by KPCC guidelines. Sudhakaran was reading out some text seemingly prepared by somebody and handed it out to him, said Unnithan who also criticised Jebi for issuing a public statement.

P P Divya's FB post fuels speculation on political future

Kannur: Amid CPM's extended district committee meetings in Kannur and rumours about her inclusion in the committee, former party leader P P Divya shared a cryptic message on Facebook on Thursday, saying some partings are not losses but may mark the beginning of new paths. Divya was removed from all party posts after she was booked for abetting the suicide of then Kannur additional district magistrate K Naveen Babu, who was found dead at his official quarters on October 15, 2024, a day after he was publicly criticised by Divya during his farewell function.

Waqf Board chairman firm in stand on Munambam land

Kochi: Reiterating his stand that Munambam land is Waqf property, Waqf Board chairman M C Mayin Haji said there was no need to review the decision of the previous board headed by Rasheed Ali Shihab Thangal. "The board has already taken a decision and we have no right to change it. It is for the Tribunal or the High Court to review," he told TNIE. Refuting allegations by Hindu organisations that he had a role in the 2003 Marad massacre, Haji challenged them to prove the allegations. "If there is even a petty case pending against me, expect for those booked as part of political struggle, let them prove it. I will accept any demand once they do," he said.

Disabled man's sit-in outside eatery exposes accesibility barriers

POOJA NAIR @ Kozhikode

FOR most people, walking into an eatery, ordering a meal and washing up afterwards are unremarkable parts of everyday life. For persons with disability, however, such simple acts can become exercises in negotiation, dependence and, at times, humiliation. In Koyilandy, a missing ramp at a restaurant turned an ordinary visit for a meal into a sit-in protest, exposing the gap between Keralam's promise of accessibility and the lived reality of those who need it most.

Ashwin Babu, a schoolteacher from Muchukunnu, staged the protest outside the restaurant after he was unable to access the establishment because it lacked a ramp for wheelchairs.

He called off the agitation after the management issued a written assurance that a ramp and other disability-friendly facilities, including accessible bathroom amenities, would be provided by October 25.

Aswin Babu

According to Ashwin, on being unable to enter the premises he requested that tea be brought to his car. However, the supervisors expressed their inability to serve tea outdoors citing the rush of diners. The exchange led to an argument, following which Ashwin began the sit-in.

Ashwin pointed out that most buildings in the state lack the basic infrastructure required for persons with disability to enter their premises comfortably and use the available facilities. He called for urgent intervention by authorities to ensure that restaurants and other establishments provide disability-friendly infrastructure.

For Surendra Nath, the incident shines light on his long struggle. He said he had been experiencing similar difficulties for the past 25 years, describing instances in which he had been compelled to eat in unhygienic spaces behind eateries because accessible seating was unavailable. He also recalled experiences in which he felt he was treated as though he were seeking charity rather than exercising a basic right.

"Are we second-class citizens? Don't we have rights too?" says Surendra Nath.

For many persons with disabilities, the problem is not limited to entering a building. Inaccessible toilets, unsuitable seating arrangements and a lack of clear access routes can make it difficult to use the establishment even after getting inside.
