Vance ducks Bibi endorsement, says focusing on US midterms

WASHINGTON

US vice president J D Vance declined to endorse Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu for reelection a day after President Donald Trump endorsed the embattled Israeli leader.

"I'm not anti-endorsing him. I'm not pro-endorsing him. I'm not getting involved in Israeli elections," Vance said of Netanyahu, in an interview Monday with journalist Mark Halperin. "I endorse American candidates and that's where I'm focused on is the midterms," he added.," Vance said on Monday during an interview with journalist Mark Halperin. "I endorse American candidates, and that's where I'm focused on the midterms," Vance added saying, "So, I'm not getting involved in Israeli elections."

Vance has campaigned for a foreign leader -- then-Hungarian prime minister Viktor Orban -- last spring before the right-wing leader's party lost that country's parliamentary election. Vance's deference to Donald Trump on Netanyahu comes at an extraordinarily sensitive time for Jewish Americans and the US alliance with Israel. Concerns about antisemitism have surged across the political spectrum ahead of the midterm elections.

Gaza pre-dawn strike kills 2

Meanwhile, Israel's military struck an apartment in Gaza before dawn, killing two people and wounding others. The victims were a husband and wife, according to Shifa Hospital.

The Israeli military said it targeted a Hamas militant. The attack followed strikes on Monday that killed at least four people. Gaza's health ministry says over 1,500 Palestinians have been killed by Israel since last year's ceasefire. UN agencies and independent experts generally consider its records reliable.

Settler violence pressures Bibi

Attacks by Israeli settlers on a US journalist and European diplomats in the occupied West Bank have intensified criticism of Benjamin Netanyahu ahead of elections.

Opposition leaders accuse his government of tolerating Jewish settler terrorism, warning that the escalating violence could further damage Israel's international standing and alienate voters concerned to a negotiated end to the war in Gaza and are instead focused only on "war and death and destruction" in the lead up to Israel's first national elections since the Hamas-led attacks.

"Sadly, right now we do not have a partner for peace in Israel," said Majed al-Ansari, spokesperson for Qatar's Foreign Ministry and adviser to the Qatari prime minister, speaking on stage at the Global Security Forum in Doha.

Al-Ansari said: "You look at all the statements coming out from all the political parties and all the political candidates right now in the elections. Does any of them even talk about peace with Palestinians? Does any of them even talk about stability of the region?" Agencies

Qatar says Israel shuns peace

Senior Qatari official says Israeli leaders are not committed about security and the government's hard-line policies.

WHO ARE IN THE RUN TO REPLACE NETANYAHU?

Naftali Bennett and Yair Lapid formed Beyachad in April, followed by 5 leaders signing a pact against Bibi on Sept 26, as reported by Al Jazeera

MEET THE CANDIDATES

GADI EISENKOT
Party: Yashar | Age: 66
Former military chief who founded the centrist Yashar party. Calls for professional governance, universal military service and an inquiry into failures preceding the October 7 attacks

NAFTALI BENNETT
Party: Beyachad | Age: 54
Former prime minister and right-wing politician who supports Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank. Leads the joint Beyachad list with Yair Lapid

YAIR LAPID
Party: Beyachad / Yesh Atid | Age: 62
Former prime minister and centrist politician. Criticises the international fallout from Israel's military campaigns but has not backed Palestinian statehood

AVIGDOR LIEBERMAN
Party: Yisrael Beiteinu | Age: 68
Former defence minister known for hard-line security views. Opposes Netanyahu, ultra-Orthodox parties and coalitions reliant on Arab parties

YAIR GOLAN
Party: The Democrats | Age: 64
Retired major-general and liberal Democrats leader, critical of the Gaza war strategy and open to cooperation with Palestinian parties

WHERE THEY DIFFER
- SECURITY: Most favour hard-line military policies; Golan is more critical of the government's war strategy
- PALESTINIAN STATEHOOD: None makes it a central commitment; the Democrats consider it a distant goal
- COALITION PARTNERS: Disagreements over Arab parties and leadership could complicate efforts to form a government

Netanyahu vows to finish Iran war with Trump's backing ahead of polls

Bibi tells they have 'a job to finish' on Iran, with Don replying, 'You're the man I want by my side'

JERUSALEM

ISRAELI Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said he and Donald Trump had "a job to finish" on Iran, as he aired a phone call in which the US president predicted his election victory and praised him ahead of Israel's October 27 polls.

A day after Trump publicly endorsed Netanyahu for the vote, the Israeli leader released a video of the telephone call in which the two right-wing leaders lavished praise on each other. "I think you're going to have a tremendous victory, actually," Trump can be heard saying on speakerphone. "You're the man I want by my side, Bibi," Trump said, referring to Netanyahu by his nickname. Netanyahu, while reminding the famously loose-lipped president that they were on an open line, hailed Trump for joining Israel in attacking Iran in February.

"Donald, we have a job to finish," Netanyahu said. "We'll finish it together. We'll finish it, and no one else will do it."

Netanyahu did not elaborate but again described Iran's clerical state, which remains in power nearly eight months after the joint attack, as "the greatest danger". Netanyahu appeared to be speaking to Trump from an air force base, where he earlier released a video warning that he had been assured of Israel's "capability to strike our enemies the moment it is required".

Iran's Revolutionary Guards said naval mines set two tankers ablaze as they attempted to cross the Strait of Hormuz via routes Tehran considers illegal. However, US Central Command rejected the claim, saying international shipping lanes had been cleared of mines. It accused Iran of using missiles and drones to attack vessels, calling the claim that the strait was closed false and saying maritime traffic remained open, with 95 per cent of vessels transiting successfully, according to CENTCOM.

Britain will deploy RAF Typhoon fighter jets to help Saudi Arabia defend against escalating Houthi attacks, the UK government announced on Tuesday. The move follows Saudi Arabia's interception of a Houthi ballistic missile targeting Riyadh, where blasts were heard and a brief danger alert issued. Saudi forces later intercepted a drone in the area. The UK will also send a transport aircraft to move defence equipment and advisers to support Saudi officers. Defence Minister Wes Streeting condemned the attacks, particularly the targeting of Riyadh airport. Agencies

China tracks US warship in disputed waters

BEIJING: China's military on Tuesday said it tracked a US Navy vessel near the disputed Sabina Shoal in the South China Sea, accusing it of violating its sovereignty. Beijing warned Washington to cease such activities. The Philippines rejected China's claims, saying no country can demand prior permission for lawful transit through international waters. The incident comes amid tensions over territorial claims, with China, Vietnam, the Philippines and Taiwan disputing parts of the Spratly Islands.

Google Cloud outage disrupts UK banks and businesses across sectors

LONDON

A power outage at a Google Cloud data centre near London caused serious failures to services on Tuesday, leading to widespread disruptions for several UK banks. Google said in a service health update that most services had returned to normal by 12.10 GMT, six hours after the incident began.

"We are seeing the recovery of services for most workloads in europe-west2," the US tech giant said, referring to its London data centre.

Google said its cloud services suffered an outage "due to a power event", in an incident that began at 6.08 GMT.

Services for the digital bank Revolut, including withdrawals from ATMs, bank transfers and bank card top-ups, were disrupted, which a source close to the matter attributed to the Google Cloud failures.

UK lenders Lloyds and HSBC confirmed that customers faced issues with their banking services. "We understand the root issues have been resolved, so we expect all our services to be back to normal soon," Lloyds said in a statement on Tuesday afternoon.

Downdetector recorded hundreds of UK outage reports affecting Rightmove, DPD and Royal Mail. HSBC said its customers experienced "difficulties accessing our services", adding that it would "monitor the situation, which is also affecting other organisations".

A Revolut spokesperson said the bank was "working to fix the issue since it was identified" and offered its apologies "to anyone affected and for any inconvenience caused". "We can confirm that all our customers' money and data are safe," the spokesperson added in a statement.

Reliance on hyperscalers

Google said it would publish a full incident report in the coming days, as the outage renewed concerns over businesses' growing reliance on cloud providers for IT resources. AP

Meta board flags poll moderation failures

PARIS: Meta's oversight board flagged recurring moderation failures during US and Brazilian elections, warning that inconsistent enforcement could suppress political speech and undermine electoral integrity. Separately, Meta said it had complied with Brazil's court order to treat President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva and challenger Flavio Bolsonaro equally online, avoiding a potential $200,000 daily fine.

Zelenskyy meets US envoys as Ukraine flags missile delivery delays

OSLO

UKRAINIAN President Volodymyr Zelenskyy arrived in Oslo on Tuesday for talks with top US envoys in a bid to get strained relations with Washington "on a more constructive path", Oslo said. "We are maintaining all contacts that can help bring peace," Zelenskyy said in a social media post announcing his arrival in Oslo. Norway's Prime Minister Jonas Gahr Store said earlier that Oslo would host talks between Zelenskyy, US envoys Steve Witkoff and Jared Kushner — the latter taking part remotely — as well as Finnish President Alexander Stubb.

The Norway talks were due to begin on Tuesday afternoon and continue into the evening, Store told reporters. "The aim is to put diplomatic efforts on a more constructive path," he said. Ahead of the meeting, Zelenskyy on Tuesday said he held "substantive" and "constructive" talks with US Secretary of State Marco Rubio, in which he insisted that the US military satellite system Ukraine uses, Starshield, "needs to be restored" and that ballistic missile interceptors "are needed to protect lives". Zelenskyy told US senators the Pentagon was delaying European-funded missile deliveries pending Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth's approval.

Rubio denied the US was withholding aid, citing global shortages of Patriot missiles. EU foreign policy chief Kaja Kallas said European support had prevented Ukraine from surrendering to Russia, questioning US peace efforts. Russian attacks killed at least six people near Kyiv and Dnipro, wounded dozens and caused power outages across 12 Ukrainian regions.

Meanwhile, Kremlin spokesperson Dmitry Peskov told reporters that Moscow hopes that a meeting in Russia with the US envoys can be organised soon, though he didn't give any indication about where or when. He said that Russian President Vladimir Putin's meetings with Trump's envoys — potentially as early as Wednesday — would be "very important." Agencies
