BIHAR GOVT MOU

reach the highest level in three major rivers. The high HFL is an indicator of heavy siltation in rivers," he added.

With heavy sedimentation drastically reducing the depth and carrying capacity of the Ganga and its major tributaries (such as the Kosi, Gandak, and Bagmati), this is attributed as one key reason behind Bihar's severe annual flooding, as the one witnessed this year. The issue has also echoed during the statewide "Nitish Samvad" campaign of the JD(U), seeking protection of Bihar interests on sharing of the Ganga river water in the Indo-Bangladesh treaty, which expires next month.

Samrat said that Bihar cabinet had in September this year approved the Bihar Water Resources Restoration and Sediment Management Policy (2026), which establishes a legal roadmap to systematically extract sediment from rivers, barrages, and reservoirs. "It focuses on maintaining the uninterrupted natural flow of water while enhancing storage capabilities, while strengthening flood management measures," he added.

He also urged Gadkari to plan four-lane highway on both sides of the Ganga river, which could be a game changer in the years to come.

Floods cause heavy losses worth thousands of crores of rupees in livestock, crops and other infrastructure damage across the state. With the signing of the MoU, Bihar hopes to address two key challenges -- ensuring flood management and meeting shortage of affordable road construction material. Lower material procurement costs for highway infrastructure development could also prove game changer for Bihar and provide a template for other states.

apradhi nahi hai," he said, linking the state's remaining major challenge to water management and flood control.

The comments quickly went viral and drew strong political reaction.

The exchange comes against the backdrop of continuing political sparring between the ruling NDA and the RJD over law and order. Yadav has been highlighting recent incidents, including a police firing in Madhubani in which an ASI allegedly opened fire after a confrontation, resulting in two deaths and two others being critically injured.

The NDA government led by CM Choudhary has maintained that crime rates have been brought under control through stricter policing and use of technology, while the opposition continues to allege that the situation remains grim and that police excesses have increased.

The BPSC advertised 74 assistant professor posts in government medical colleges and hospitals in 2017, including 13 for SC candidates and five for SC women.

Sharan applied under the SC category with a caste certificate issued by the sub-divisional officer, Patna Sadar, on August 2, 2006, mentioning her husband's name. She was called for an interview on February 28, 2018, and her original documents were verified. However, her name did not figure in the SC category when results were declared on August 8, 2019.

During document verification, the BPSC found that some married women candidates had submitted caste or non-creamy layer certificates carrying their husbands' names instead of their fathers'. It issued notices in July 2018, asking them to submit corrected certificates, failing which they would be considered under the unreserved category.

Sharan was shifted to the unreserved category, where she fell short of the cut-off. The BPSC said she had scored 29 marks against the unreserved cut-off of 37.50. She challenged the decision in the high court. The single judge directed the authorities to consider her appointment under the SC category on merit, provided she was otherwise eligible.

The single judge had observed that a candidate does not lose their reserved-category status merely because an earlier certificate does not conform to updated guidelines. It also said the responsibility lay with government officials to issue certificates acceptable to recruiting and selection authorities.

The division bench noted that the recruitment advertisement did not require SC/ST candidates to submit caste certificates mentioning their fathers' names.

It also considered Sharan's 2006 certificate issued by the sub-divisional officer, whose rank was higher than that of a circle officer. A subsequent certificate issued by the circle officer on August 17, 2019, mentioning her father's name, was also placed before the court.

Citing the full bench judgment in Braj Kishore Prasad vs State of Bihar in 1998, the bench said courts could grant relief in deserving cases involving extreme hardship or injustice, provided the candidate had acted diligently.

The bench also referred to Supreme Court judgments on reservation, saying its constitutional purpose under Articles 15(4) and 16(4) was to address inequality in public employment and ensure equal opportunity for disadvantaged communities.

Finding no flaw in the single judge's order, the division bench dismissed the BPSC appeal, giving relief to the doctor.

SC ON PROTEST SITES

was not confined to business profits but extended to daily wagers and small traders.

"These are two competing claims — right to protest is recognised by the Constitution and right to trade and earn livelihood," said the bench, adding that the way forward was to identify public spaces for demonstrations without hampering the ability of others to earn their livelihood.

Solicitor General Tushar Mehta, representing the Centre and Delhi police, told the bench that permission for the July 20 demonstration had been granted for only a day, but the protesters occupied the site for 17 days and subsequently called for a march to Parliament without permission. He said those organising a bandh or protest must take responsibility for its consequences.

The bench asked Rohatgi to implead the organisations that had organised the demonstrations, saying their responses were necessary before the court could decide the competing claims. It also asked him to place on record an assessment of the financial losses suffered by traders.

Concerns over police action

The proceedings also covered petitions raising concerns over police action during the July demonstrations, including alleged illegal detentions, the use of facial recognition technology, and surveillance of protesters. The court took note of nine categories of issues arising from the petitions and allowed the Centre and Delhi Police to file their responses, either during the course of the day or shortly thereafter.

To be sure, the Supreme Court had earlier invoked its powers under Article 142 of the Constitution to quash FIRs registered against students who participated in the July 20-25 protests over the NEET-UG examination. It directed that any other FIRs relating to the same incidents across the country would not be pursued or investigated and would be treated as closed, while permitting action against 2,873 individuals identified by Delhi Police as having serious criminal antecedents.

The court is also examining the controversy over the Delhi Police's decision to denotify Jantar Mantar as a designated protest site and shift demonstrations to Ramlila Ground, Burari Ground and CBD Ground. It has issued notice on a challenge to the decision, saying it would examine whether the authorities had independently applied their mind to the suitability and efficacy of Jantar Mantar as a protest venue.

Surveillance at protest sites:

On the surveillance challenge, advocate Prashant Bhushan, appearing for the Software Freedom Law Center, India, questioned the legal framework under which facial recognition was being used and its implications for the right to privacy.

The court said the issue could not be reduced to the mere presence of CCTV cameras at a public place. The court would have to examine whether the use of technology to identify individuals and match their images against databases affected privacy, and whether such use was backed by a legitimate state aim. The bench also referred to amendments to the Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920, [do we mention the updated Criminal Procedure (Identification) Act, 2022?] that enable the collection and use of biometric information, including iris scans.

The court had, at an earlier hearing, directed the Centre to produce the orders issued under Section 163 of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita during the protests. On Tuesday, senior advocate Menaka Guruswamy, appearing for some petitioners, said the relevant orders had still not been supplied to them, while the Centre maintained that its affidavit covered the issue. Senior counsel Mukta Gupta, N Hariharan, CU Singh, Meenakshi Arora, PV Dinesh and Arundhati Katju also appeared in the matter on behalf of the petitioners and applicants.

The bench said the petitions would be taken up categorywise, with lawyers being allotted fixed time to advance their arguments, in an effort to ensure that the wide range of issues could be addressed in an orderly manner.

Meanwhile, Delhi Police commissioner Anurag Kumar on Tuesday defended the denotification of Jantar Mantar as a designated protest site, telling the Supreme Court that the decision was based on a Union home ministry committee's unanimous recommendation and a changed security and public-order situation.

US, IRAN PURSUE DEAL

would not accept Washington's "excessive demands".

Tehran would respond forcefully, in the region and beyond, to US strikes, the official added.

Oil prices rose by about $1 on Tuesday, having dropped more than 7% the previous day on hopes diplomacy was progressing.

Iran's Revolutionary Guards said they downed a US MQ-9 drone and two Lucas drones in the skies near the Strait of Hormuz.

QALIBAF: THE BALL IS IN WASHINGTON'S COURT

Iran's Parliament Speaker Mohammad Baqer Qalibaf said the ball was in Washington's court after Tehran had delivered what he described as a "strong and rational response".

"The enemy seeks to force the Iranian nation into submission through threats and military action, but they are sorely mistaken; Iran will not submit," Qalibaf said, adding that Tehran's response to any miscalculation by the US would be unpredictable and disregard geographical constraints.

Countries across the region have been bracing for the possibility that US President Donald Trump could resume attacks once Tuesday's midterms are over.

But Trump cast doubt on Monday about whether he would follow through on threats to resume military strikes after the vote, saying he believed Tehran wanted a deal as soon as possible and that such an agreement "could happen."

Asked by reporters if he was considering striking Iran after the midterms, Trump replied, "No."

The head of Iran's armed forces general staff, Ali Abdollahi, said Iran's military was updating its target lists to include US and Israeli material and non-material assets and would respond immediately to any threat, without geographical limits.

Since Supreme Leader Ayatollah Mojtaba Khamenei ordered the armed forces to respond immediately and without "geographic limits" to any enemy threat, Iranian officials and media outlets have increasingly raised the prospect of striking bases beyond the region that are used to launch attacks on Iran.

Hardline newspaper Kayhan said on Tuesday that US facilities in Britain, Italy, Greece, Romania, Albania and Cyprus could be targeted by Iranian missiles in the event of renewed war.

IRANIAN-SAUDI TALKS

In parallel with the exchange of messages between Tehran and Washington through intermediaries, regional diplomatic efforts are continuing to prevent further escalation.

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araqchi said on Tuesday that talks with Saudi Arabia were continuing to seek new regional security arrangements that would exclude foreign military involvement.

Last week, top officials from Saudi Arabia, Turkey and Pakistan met Iranian officials in Tehran, the first high-level contact between Iran and the three nations since August. The US-Israeli war on Iran started in late February and since then, fighting has spread to Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Riyadh said the visit was intended to open negotiating channels to "prevent the return of military escalation," as fighting between Saudi Arabia and Yemen's Iran-aligned Houthis had intensified.

Houthi attacks on the kingdom escalated as the powerful militia advanced towards the Bab el-Mandeb Strait, a key shipping chokepoint that lies on the opposite side of the Arabian Peninsula from the Strait of Hormuz.

The Houthis have also attacked Saudi oil facilities and airports including Riyadh's international airport, disrupting flights and oil exports and drawing Saudi air strikes on Yemen in response.

Impoverished Yemen has been mired in a civil war since the Houthis pushed the internationally recognised, Saudi-backed government out of the capital, Sanaa, in 2014.

Saudi Arabia's quarterly fiscal deficit more than doubled as the kingdom faces the financial toll of the US-Iran war that began more than eight months ago.

The government posted a budget shortfall of 84 billion riyals ($22.4 billion) in the third quarter, up about 145% from the prior period, state-run Al Ekhbariya TV reported, citing the Finance Ministry. Saudi authorities in September increased their projected budget deficit for this year to 4.9% of GDP
