Manamadurai potters balance high demand with new restrictions

For many years, they used to extract soil from Vaigai River and local tanks to make earthen lamps, but now authorities have denied them permission to dig clay from local waterbodies

The Hindu Bureau
SIVAGANGA

As Karthigai Deepam approaches, potters at Manamadurai in Sivaganga district are working at a feverish pace. From morning till night, they spin their pottery wheel to produce millions of small earthen lamps, as this is the most important time of the year for them to make money.

Nevertheless, even with the high demand for lamps, the potters face a serious problem because authorities have denied them permission to take clay from local waterbodies.

For many years, the potters of Manamadurai have used soil from Vaigai River and local tanks to make earthen lamps. Now, the new rules prevent them from digging clay in traditional areas. Because of this, they struggle to find enough raw material while trying to complete large orders for the festival.

A potter makes a clay lamp at Manamadurai. L. BALACHANDAR

"We work day and night with very little sleep to complete orders from all over the State," says Ganesan, a local potter. "It is hard to work when we cannot get clay. In the past, our families took clay from local water sources without hurting the environment. Now, without permission to dig, we have to buy expensive clay from other places or stop working. During the festival of lights, our work is in trouble."

Lack of access to local clay increases production costs and reduces profits. The local clay has a specific quality that keeps lamps from breaking. But, because of the rules, families cannot store enough clay ahead of time and must rush to finish their work.

Another local potter, Selvi, talks about the difficulties faced by the community. "We make every lamp by hand to keep our tradition alive, but this year we also carry debt," she rues. "We understand the need to protect water bodies, but stopping us from getting clay without providing another option hurts our work. If we cannot get the right clay, potters in Manamadurai will not be able to continue."

However, Mr. Ganesan, says they have receiving consistent orders from across the State and even from countries like Malaysia. "As traditional potmakers, we have mastered the art and it gets reflected in the products we make."

As a pot-maker with more than 50 years of experience, the 72-year-old man says he has seen a variety of designs in lamps that are being made in different parts of the State and updating himself with new designs and other features with the help of the younger generation through social media.

Deduct Madurai's drinking water from its own allocation: farmers

The Hindu Bureau
SIVAGANGA

During the farmers' grievance meeting held in Sivaganga here on Tuesday farmers strongly demanded that drinking water released from the Vaigai Dam to Madurai city be deducted exclusively from Madurai district's water allocation.

Raising pressing issues concerning local agriculture and civic infrastructure, farmer Ayyachamy pointed out that while 69 cusecs of water was released daily for Madurai city's drinking water needs, it is currently being deducted from the combined allocation of Madurai, Sivaganga, and Ramanathapuram districts.

He argued that because many irrigation lands in Madurai district have been converted into buildings while still receiving water allocations, old ayacut Vaigai irrigation areas must be properly recalculated.

Responding to the demand, the District Collector P. Akash assured that a formal recommendation would be sent to the government to adjust the drinking water allocation to Madurai district's account and recalculate the irrigation areas.

The meeting also addressed other grievances, such as long-delayed house site pattas for residents, demands for long-staple cotton seeds and procurement facilities, the completion of the unbuilt regulated market in Ilayangudi, and declining Aavin milk production coupled with rising private milk sales in the district.

Thirupuvanam Town Panchayat President Sengaimaran, said, in Sivaganga district, Aavin milk production has decreased from 90,000 litre to 55,000 litre. However, private milk sales have increased. Taking advantage of this, some private entities are also selling substandard milk.

Additionally, when a farmer named Abdul Rahman noted that wild pigs hiding in Seemai karuvelam trees were damaging crops due to restrictions on removing the invasive trees, the Collector said the Water Resources Department and Rural Development Department could clear Seemai karuvelam trees without requiring permission from the forest department.

1,300 kg of PDS rice seized

The Hindu Bureau
SIVAGANGA

About 1,300 kg of PDS rice was seized from a car near Karaikudi in Sivaganga district on Tuesday.

Acting on a tip-off, a team from Pallathur police station conducted a vehicle check at Nangampatti and intercepted a speeding car. A search of the vehicle yielded 26 gunny bags of subsidised rice, totalling 1,300 kg, bearing the official government seal. The police confiscated the smuggled rice and the vehicle.

The driver, identified as Thirumurugan from Siruvayal, was arrested.

A detailed investigation has been launched to trace the ration shop involved in the illicit diversion of rice and to uncover any wider smuggling networks operating in the region.

Sri Lankan boat drifts into Indian waters, two detained

The Hindu Bureau
RAMESWARAM

Two fishermen from Jaffna, Sri Lanka, were brought ashore by Indian authorities near the Pamban North Coastal Harbour here on Tuesday after weather conditions and fuel shortages forced their craft into Indian territorial waters.

The fishermen, identified as 27-year-old Jenonan and 31-year-old Divoshan, both residents of Gurunagar in Jaffna, had set out for a routine fishing expedition from the Jaffna harbour on Monday evening.

However, sudden weather fluctuations accompanied by heavy rainfall and high winds pushed their country craft off course and across the international maritime boundary line.

Experiencing critically low supply of fuel, the crew maneuvered the vessel toward the Pamban coastline. Alerted to the incoming foreign vessel, police officers alongside duty constables from the Thangachimadam Police Station arrived on site to monitor the situation.

Local police coordinated with the Marine Police Station after spotting the vessel navigating close to shore.

Marine Police personnel dispatched to the scene safely escorted the two men and their boat to the coast.

Officers confiscated the vessel along with a fishing net and approximately 10 kg of harvested prawns.

The two fishermen were subsequently taken into custody by the Mandapam Marine Police for detailed inquiry and further legal proceedings.

Woman beats alcoholic son to death after domestic quarrel in Ramanathapuram

The Hindu Bureau
RAMANATHAPURAM

A mother beat her inebriated son to death during a quarrel near Ramanathapuram on Monday.

Police said Karuppusamy, 41, a daily wage labourer, resided near Sathankulam village in Ramanathapuram district. His wife died some years ago and he lived with his mother Anguthai, 58, and a 14-year-old daughter. He consumed alcohol evetyday and went home and picked up quarrels. He also damaged household items.

On Monday night, Karuppusamy went home drunk, picked up a fight with his mother, and smashed household items. Angered by his behaviour, Anguthai attacked him with a stick. Severely injured, he was taken by ambulance to Ramanathapuram Government Medical College Hospital, where doctors declared him 'brought dead'.

Kenikarai police registered a case against Anguthai. Since she fell sick after the incident, she was admitted to Ramanathapuram Government Hospital.
