‘China firm reportedly got banned Nvidia chips in secret’

$73M hardware reportedly smuggled into China despite US export ban

WASHINGTON

A Chinese company founded by Alice Huang, the alleged spy for Beijing at the centre of the scandal surrounding Nvidia, obtained banned AI chips, Bloomberg News reported on Friday.

“A Chinese company founded by Alice Huang, the woman at the centre of a controversy dogging Nvidia Corp., procured smuggled AI chips that were installed at a Shanghai data center with links to Megaspeed International Pte,” the Bloomberg report said.

Report said chips worth $73 million reached China.

Nvidia’s former CEO Jensen Huang resigned on Thursday after admitting to having extramarital affairs, including one reportedly with Alice Huang. China denies that she is a spy. The scandal has raised concerns that high-end

Nvidia microchips might have found their way to China, the United States’ main AI rival, in circumvention of Washington’s export restrictions.

Huang is mainly known as a former top executive at Megaspeed International, a Singapore-based data center company that has drawn scrutiny over allegedly steering Nvidia chips to China.

However, she also founded Shanghai Longteng Intelligent Computing, a company based in the eastern Chinese economic hub. Bloomberg reported, citing an unnamed source, that Aperia Cloud Services, an official Nvidia partner headquartered in Singapore, purchased servers containing Nvidia’s H800 chips from Dell Technologies. Those servers later ended up in the hands of Shanghai Longteng, the financial news outlet said, citing documents submitted to the Chinese government. It was not clear how the hardware was obtained or whether Alice Huang was involved in the deal, according to Bloomberg.

The United States banned the export of H800 chips to China in 2023, as part of an effort to slow Beijing’s development of AI technology.

2 Iranian drones downed en route to Bahrain: US

WASHINGTON

THE US military said Friday it shot down two Iranian attack drones headed toward Bahrain, denying Iran’s claim that it had struck a US radar system in the kingdom. CENTCOM, the US command center covering the region, said there were no injuries or damage.

WAR WATCH

Iran’s state-owned IRNA news agency quoted a statement by the Revolutionary Guard as saying the attack on the radar system followed a US strike on a telecommunications pole in the southern Iranian port of Sirik.

Bahrain has been one of the strongest critics of Iran and is home to the American Navy’s 5th Fleet.

The statement said the attack on the radar was a serious warning to the US to cease its strikes. It was Iran’s first report of targeting a facility in Bahrain since September. During an air war that began in February, Iran targeted US bases in neighboring nations including Bahrain in retaliation for US strikes. AP
