Stephen Miller replaces Susie Wiles as WH chief of staff

Washington: US President Donald Trump has hinted at further Cabinet changes following the Republicans' midterm rout, even as he denied that his decision to replace White House chief of staff Susie Wiles with longtime loyalist Stephen Miller was linked to the election setback.

"I'll be doing maybe a few changes. I don't want to mention who," Trump told CBS News in an interview scheduled to air on Sunday.

If he expected to fire more officials, Trump replied, "I do," but added he was largely satisfied with his Cabinet.

He expressed confidence in Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth, whom some Republicans have blamed for the party's electoral losses. On Friday, Trump announced Miller, currently Deputy Chief of Staff and a key architect of his immigration agenda, would replace Wiles on Monday, November 9. Wiles, who helped lead Trump's 2024 presidential campaign and became the first woman to serve as White House chief of staff, will move to his political operation. Denying her departure was election-related, Trump said: "It's just time. Sometimes you change." He praised Miller as "a great fighter", dubbing him loyal, smart and effective.

The appointment drew sharp criticism from Democrats. House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries urged Trump to "Fire him today", while Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer vowed to fight Miller "every step of the way". Outgoing Republican Senator Thom Tillis also opposed the move, saying "the president needs to rethink" it. Democratic Senator Alex Padilla accused Miller of shaping controversial immigration policies and pledged congressional scrutiny. However, Vice President JD Vance welcomed the appointment, calling Miller "an amazing patriot". Secretary of State Marco Rubio, FBI chief Kash Patel and others backed the decision. Miller, a senior figure in both Trump administrations, has been instrumental in shaping the president's hardline immigration and domestic policies. —Agencies
