Despite ban, safety staff of rlys shoots reels on duty

New Delhi: Safety category employees of Indian Railways, including loco pilots, guards, station masters and signal maintainers, are making reels for social media while on duty, raising operational safety concerns and exposing critical information in the public domain, officials said. Reel making by station masters showing panels, guards working in brake vans, chief loco inspectors during counselling, pointsmen during signal exchange and loco pilots while operating locomotives violates railway ministry's instructions to all zonal heads to prevent such practices.

In 2021, the ministry had received a complaint through the CPGRAM portal stating that several videos showing the working of locomotives were available on social media platforms, including YouTube. "Zonal Railways are, therefore, advised to direct the supervisory staff to counsel the crew against uploading videos showing the working of locomotives on YouTube or other social media platforms, as this may compromise the safety of the loco as well as the passengers," the ministry had directed.

COMPROMISING PASSENGER SAFETY

The majority of employees active on social media were young recruits who were either in the process of completing their training or had already joined duty across various departments, such as Signal and Telecommunication, Engineering, Traffic and Commercial.

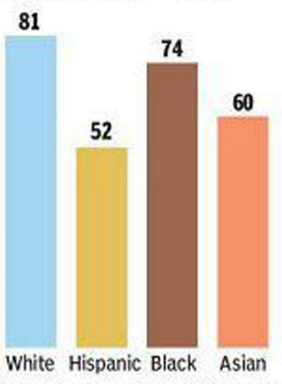

Nevertheless, some experienced employees, including chief loco inspectors, are also "competing with younger colleagues" in making reels and, in the process, violating railway rules and compromising passenger safety, they said. PTI
